this as indeed in all matters, are indicated in the following passage:
 " . . . I am a student of the British constitution; my unhesitating conviction is that the constitution of the Empire ought to develop, as it is actually developing, in the same way in which grew up the constitution of England. The relation between England and the Dominions . . . need not be developed by arduous feats of legislation. It should grow under the influence of reasonable understandings and of fair customs." This hope seemed nearer realization because it was written after the outbreak of the war, to which, it may be added, Professor Dicey makes eloquent reference, in the tone familiar to American readers of English pamphlet literature.

Enough has been said to indicate the interest of the Eighth Edition of The Law of the Constitution to all students of government.
